

Development Luristan Finials
Master of Animals Without Chicken Heads

Early Master of Animals Without Chicken

Hixenbough
Ancient Art

LACMA

Birmingham

Penn Museum

Palmyra
Heritage
Gallery

Pininterest Sackler Galery

Arch. Staatssammlung Munich

British

Museum

LACMA

Galeris
Hafner

A rather unusual one. It is actually a pinhead and not a finial.

The figure looks female but that is because of what we perceive as hairdo. In reality those locks are what has been left of the ears the beasts are always after-

There are, however, a few females among the masters as indicted by breasts.

Master of Animals With Chicken Heads

The first two examples show the typical chicken heads but also a cow or a goat. All domesticated animals, in other words. The cow is also strangling the beast and the men's ears are best heads. There are many additional heads and the whole thing looks overdone, Possibly a fake?

The following master of animals finials were collected over some time and their origin is often obscure (e.g. from Pinterest without a source).

They may have come from auctions, quite a few from the Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA), the Museum of Fine Arts (MOA) Boston, or the Metropolitan Museum New York.

In contrast to my usual practice I have included a few pictures that are less than crisp (like the one with the sheep on the left)

Timeline auction Sept. 2025; also in Wikipedia

Artemission

asli M. Heerameck Collectic

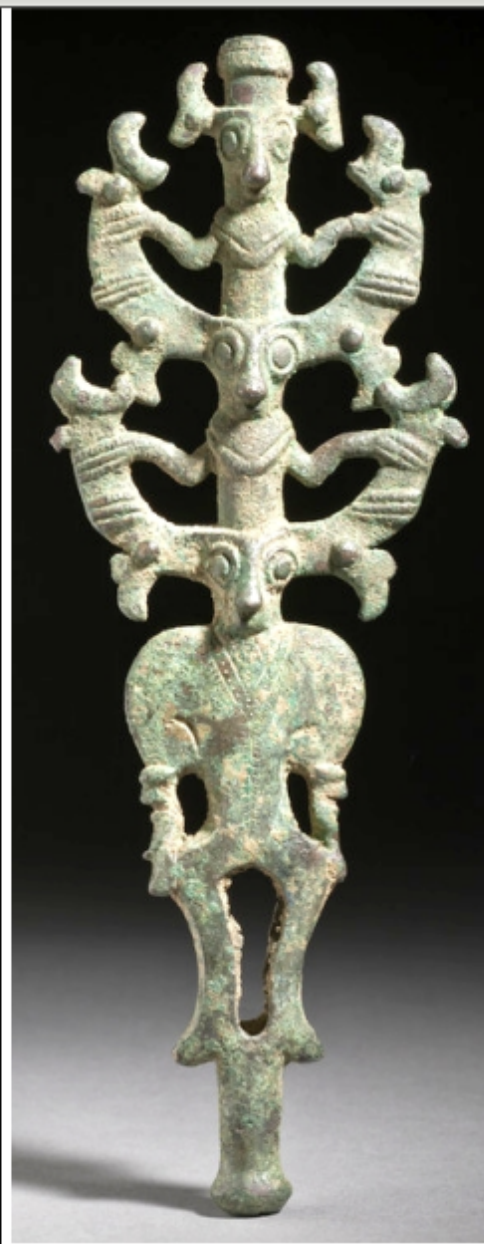

asli M. Heerameck Collecti

asli M. Heerameck Collec

asli M. Heerameck Collectic

Lacma

asli M. Heerameck Collectir

asli M. Heerameck Collecti

asli M. Heerameck Colle

Phil Berg Collection

British Mus

Jasli M. Heeramanek Collecti

Henry.

Archäologische Staatssammlung, München, 2002x

